

FRANKLIN GROVE MAYOR APPEALS TO THE SHERIFF

BALLOT WILL BE YARD SQUARE AT COMING ELECTION

And in Addition Voters Will Receive Five Small Ballots..

County Clerk Fred G. Dimick this morning received the certificate of election from the office of Secretary of State Louis L. Emmerson for the general election on November 4. The task of preparing the specimen ballots is now under way and they will be given to the printer tomorrow. The ballot this fall will probably be the largest in size ever used in Lee county.

The ballot, which gives space to ten different political parties, will doubtless be about 24 inches square. The certificate contains the names of all candidates of the ten different parties and to this are to be added the names of the county candidates.

This is only one of the ballots with which the voter will be presented however, when he goes to his polling place to vote at the coming national, state and county election. He will be presented with five other ballots, making six altogether. On five of the small ballots there will appear special propositions on which the voter will be called upon to register his opinion.

Order of Parties. The names of the candidates seeking office at the coming election appear under the names of ten different political parties, arranged in the following order on the ballot: "Republican Party," "Democratic," "Socialist," "Progressive Party," "Socialist Labor Party," "Workers Party of America," "Commonwealth Land Party," "Prohibition Party," "Independent Republican Party," "Limit Land Manipulations and Rents Party."

The republican and democratic are the only parties which have complete tickets in the field, including candidates for county offices.

Some Tickets Incomplete. The socialist and the progressive tickets have only a limited number of candidates in the field. Those seeking office on the socialist ticket are the candidates for United States Senator, candidates for all the state offices and representatives in Congress, while the progressive ticket has a candidate for president, vice-president and presidential and vice-presidential electors.

The remainder of the parties have incomplete tickets in the field. The "Limit Land Manipulations and Rents Party" has but one candidate that being for the office of United States Senator.

Officers to be Elected. The officers to be elected at the coming election are: President of the United States, Vice President of the United States, Electors of President and Vice President of the United States, Governor, Lieutenant Governor, Secretary of State, Auditor of Public Accounts, State Treasurer, Attorney General, Trustees of the University of Illinois.

Representatives in Congress, State at Large, Representative in Congress in the 13th Congressional District, Representatives in General Assembly, 35th District, Judges of Circuit Courts, Clerk of the Circuit Court, Coroner, County Surveyor.

Propositions. The five special propositions to be submitted to the voters are entitled as follows: 1.—An Act to amend Sections 4, 5, 8, 11 and 12 of the Banking Laws of the State of Illinois. 2.—An Act to amend Sections 9 of the Banking Law of the State of Illinois. 3.—Proposed amendment of Section 2 of Article 14 of the Constitution of the State of Illinois. 4.—An Act to Provide for leasing that portion of the Illinois and Michigan Canal therein described. 5.—An Act to provide for the construction of durable hard-surfaced roads upon public highways of the state of Illinois.

Makes No Difference to State When Man is Hanged, Says Officer

Springfield, Ill., Oct. 15.—(By the Associated Press.)—Explaining yesterday's action of the state division of pardons and paroles in recommending a reprieve until January 16 for Hess Connor, negro, of Cairo, who was sentenced to hang tomorrow, Supt. Will Colvin said the division believed "it made little difference to the state whether an individual is executed in October or January."

"In keeping with its policy that every person under the death penalty is entitled to have his case reviewed by the highest tribunal," Mr. Colvin said, "the division of pardons and paroles recommended to the governor that he grant a reprieve of 90 days to Hess Connor, under death sentence in Pulaski county."

"It was represented to the division that it would be necessary for those interested in Connor to take up a collection in small amounts, in order to secure funds with which to defray the expense of taking the case to the supreme court. Time was also asked in order to present the question of mentality to the courts."

"In the opinion of the members of the division of pardons and paroles every person sentenced to death is entitled to have his case reviewed by the highest tribunal. For many years it has been the fixed policy of the former board of pardons and the present division of pardons and paroles to recommend reprieves on this ground."

"In the opinion of the members of the division it makes little difference to the state whether an individual is executed in October or January."

As a result the Japanese consul at Mukden has agreed to issue a warning to all Japanese papers here to suppress false reports. General Chang told Captain Baldwin that he did not believe the reports, but added that he was not in a position to regulate the Japanese press pointing out that his troops were being moved south over the Japanese-controlled South Manchurian railway.

Moving to New Charge—Car Crashed Into Stalled Truck.

Freeport, Oct. 16.—Mrs. Mary Duval, aged 28, wife of Rev. Duval, pastor of the Methodist church at Byron in Ogle county, was instantly killed last evening on the Grant highway when the Ford touring car in which they were driving, crashed into the rear of a stalled motor truck. Rev. Duval had recently been transferred from the Methodist church at Orangeville to Byron and he with his wife were on their way to their new charge. A large truck belonging to a Rockford concern is said to have stalled on the paving and had sent to Rockford for another car to tow the truck in. HYDROGEN GAS IN BIG DIRIGIBLE IS RELEASED IN AIR

World's Greatest Craft of Kind to Be Filled with Helium Gas.

By Associated Press Leased Wire. Lakehurst, N. J., Oct. 16.—The task of releasing from the ZR-3 its hydrogen, representing an expenditure of $11,600 probably will be completed today. Immediately after the Zeppelin landed, forty seamen began preparations to deflate the gas bags.

Because of the danger in conserving hydrogen the contents will be allowed to escape into the air. When the craft is re-inflated, helium will be used.

In return for its expenditures in connection with the ZR-3, the government collected less than $50 in duties when the craft landed. Chased as a German merchantman, the Zeppelin was boarded and inspected by custom, health and immigration authorities as though it were an ocean liner. The manifest prepared by the commander of the ZR-3, described the Zeppelin, "as in ballast" carrying eight sacks of mail.

Visitors who inspected the Zeppelin were struck by the luxurious equipment, from its state rooms, equalling any of the finest liners, to its kitchen, unexcelled by that of any hotel. Bathrooms with hot and cold water gave the impression of being in a hotel suite.

Democratic Data Not Precise. The committee did not get precise information as to democratic contributions and expenditures. Lincoln Dixon, manager of western headquarters, said his division had received and expended $22,500 exclusive of rentals paid by the national committee.

Mr. Dixon said all of the $22,500 except $5000 had come from the democratic national committee. The $5000 was contributed on Oct. 7 by George E. Brennan, democratic leader of Illinois, he said, at a time when the western headquarters was "short."

Mr. Hodges told the committee that the $1,714,317 gross total received by the republican organization had come from 16,902 contributors, the largest sum received from any single contributor being $25,000.

Cash on hand and in bank: Washington headquarters, $11,893; Chicago headquarters, $23,576. Total, $35,472.

From 72,000 Contributors. In a prepared statement read to the committee, Congressman Nelson said the contributions had been received from approximately 72,000 contributors.

Aside from the advances or contributions made by National Treasurer W. T. Rawleigh, Mr. Nelson said, "there has been received one contribution of $5,000 and three contributions of $1,000 each and the remaining contributions are in smaller amounts, mostly in sums of $1."

"The detail of expenditures under the Chicago national headquarters as shown by the last daily report of the national treasurer, W. T. Rawleigh, are as follows:

"Salaries $20,113; traveling $22,002; printing $21,163; postage $4,270; rent $3,833; furniture and furniture rental $547; office supplies and expenses $1,901; freight and express $1,863; publicity $18,513; miscellaneous $769.

"This committee has no outstanding obligations except for printing and supplies, the amount of which, when deliveries are completed, will not exceed $36,000.

"Any further statements desired by the committee would be most cheerfully furnished."

Nothing to State Funds. Mr. Nelson said each state organization collects its own funds for state use and that the national organization contributes nothing to the state bodies.

Replying to questions by Chairman Borah, Representative Nelson said his organization had originally made a budget for national expenditures but

COLUMBIA BUYS A HAT—
By Patricia Flinn.

In her milliner's shoppe, Columbia sat.

Trying to pick out a new fall hat. Was the "Davis" turban a bit too small.

For a fair young matron to wear in fall?

Then the saleslady showed her a new creation.

Something RED in the hat line for a nation.

With a futuristic design and angle. Primmed out in original fange-dangle.

Columbia tried it on—the change.

I tell you, friends, it was more than strange.

The shopkeeper cried, "It's the latest yet."

Wisconsin bound, and style La Follette."

Columbia looked in the mirror, and knew.

Her complexion could never stand that hue.

She looked at her old bonnet, "Coolidge" made.

Of such ample size, such a sensible shade.

"I need it for wear," she said with a smile.

"And I think my old one will do for a while."

Helen McGrue to Be
Bride G. E. Rynearson

The State Register of Springfield published Sunday morning, Oct. 12th, printed the following notice of interest to Dixon relatives and friends of Mr. Rynearson:

Mrs. Elizabeth McGrue, 221 South College street, announces the engagement and approaching marriage of her daughter, Helen Elizabeth, to Glenn Rynearson, son of Mr. and Mrs. George E. Rynearson of Dixon, Ill.

The wedding will be an event of late fall. The engagement is news of extreme interest to the many friends of Miss McGrue and Mr. Rynearson here.

Miss McGrue is a talented and popular member of the younger social set. She is a graduate of the Springfield high school and has studied music at the Tiffany School of Music.

Mr. Rynearson is connected with the state department of public works and buildings in the division of highways as district engineer of materials for the Southern Illinois district. He served during the war for two years overseas as a member of the Engineer corps, Thirty-third division. He is a member of the Hillsboro Country club.

A number of pre-nuptial parties are being planned for Miss McGrue in the near future.

Polyanna Officers
Elected Officers

The members of the Polyanna class of St. Paul's Lutheran church, taught by Mrs. Austin George, held a business meeting Tuesday evening at the home of Mrs. George, at which time they elected officers as follows:

President—Marian Hahn.
Secretary—Frances Witzleb.
Treasurer—Irma Joynt.
Press Correspondent—Josephine Mo-line.

Other business was discussed. Refreshments were served by the hostess and a pleasant social hour was enjoyed.

Menus for a Family

Tested by SISTER MARY.

Breakfast—Grapes, cereal, thin cream, scrambled eggs with tomatoes, whole wheat toast, sautéed potatoes, milk, coffee.

Luncheon—Cream of celery soup, toast sticks, hearts of lettuce, baked Indian pudding, milk, tea.

Dinner—Stewed chicken, gravy, mashed potatoes, creamed onions, carrot salad, baked peach pudding with sugar and cream, milk, coffee.

A plain soft-boiled egg should be served to the child under school age in place of the scrambled eggs for his breakfast. And he will not miss the potatoes, which are a bit trying for very youthful digestions.

Scrambled Eggs With Tomatoes.
Five eggs, 1 cup chopped tomatoes, 1 teaspoon sugar, 2 tablespoons butter, ½ teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon pepper.

Pare tomatoes and cut in small pieces to make one cup. Put tomatoes and sugar in frying pan and simmer 10 minutes. Add butter. Beat eggs slightly with a fork, season with salt and pepper and add to tomatoes. Cook, lifting and turning with fork until mixture is thick and firm. Remove at once from hot pan and serve.

Baked Indian Pudding.
Two and one-half cups hot milk, 3 tablespoons cornmeal, 4 tablespoons molasses, ½ teaspoon salt, ½ teaspoon ginger.

Heat milk to the scalding point and pour slowly over meal in top of double boiler. Add molasses, salt and ginger after meal has cooked over hot water for half an hour. Pour into well-buttered pudding dish and bake two hours in a slow oven. The pudding must bake very slowly. Serve warm with cream.

Carrot Salad.
One cup grated carrot, ½ cup minced celery, ½ teaspoon onion juice, 1 tablespoon lemon juice, ½ teaspoon salt, ½ cup whipping cream.

Wash and scrape carrots and grate. Combine with celery and season with salt, onion juice and lemon juice. Keep on ice until ready to serve. Whip cream until stiff and fold in prepared carrots. Serve on lettuce with minced parsley sprinkled over salad mixture. The cream may be either sweet or sour.

FASHIONS.
The importance of the wide leather belt as an accessory for the fall tailleur cannot be overestimated.

It is quite the thing to have the street frock match exactly in color the fur with which it is to be worn.

A double-headed hatpin with one black pearl and one white one is very smart stuck through the front of a white felt hat.

Many of the most interesting gowns are shamed at one side to reveal a petticoat or insert of gorgeous material.

A smart little frock of gray wool has a row of silver buttons the size of a dime set very close together all the way from neckline to hemline and has a very wide band of gray four outlining the narrow hem.

Squares or very large dots of velvet are woven into silk voile to produce a material that is very lovely for negligees or draped gowns.

White velvet gowns are very novel for evening. They are draped very simply or possibly trimmed with rhinestones or pearls.

Sleeves on daytime frocks have grown longer and sometimes extend far over the hand.

TO ATTEND FOOTBALL GAME AT CHAMPAIGN.
Mr. and Mrs. O. L. Gearhart will motor to Champaign Friday morning and will attend the foot ball game and will also visit Mrs. Gearhart's parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. M. Van Wegen.

MRS. LOULOU THOMAS, POLO, MONDAY HOSTESS.
Polo, Ill., Oct. 14.—Miss Loulou Thomas entertained the afternoon 500 club Monday, 1 o'clock luncheon preceded the card game. This was the first meeting of the club this season.

ROAST CHICKEN DINNER WEDNESDAY.
The ladies of the Christian church will serve a roast chicken dinner next Wednesday at noon at the church.

HOUSEHOLD SUGGESTIONS—

Salt Toughens Meat.
Never add salt to uncooked meat.

It was a most enjoyable evening to all present. Mrs. John Weiss winning the first prize and Miss Esther Barton winning the consolation prize.

Dainty refreshments were served, artistic decorations adding to the pleasure of all.

Mendota Entertained
W. R. C. Meeting

Mrs. Ethel Brookner, president of the Dixon W. R. C., and a number of ladies from the Rock Falls and Sterling Corps, were in Mendota Tuesday where they attended the convention of the 13th district of the Women's Relief Corps.

It was held in the beautiful Elk's home in Mendota and dinner was served there also to the delegates from the district, numbering around three hundred.

The district president, Mrs. Anna Weed, of Lanark, presided during the meeting. There was special music, and the Mendota corps exemplified the work and ritual in a very commendable way. The Mendota corps was highly complimented by the department inspector, Mrs. Mary Gregory, who gave them an inspection.

Mrs. Grace Scott of Rock Falls acted as assistant conductor for the convention. Mrs. Kethahn of Walnut was elected for district president next year and Mrs. Lovina Blanchard of Mendota was elected the new Senior Vice-President of the district. The next convention will be held at Lanark.

The mayor of Mendota heartily welcomed the delegates to the city. Mrs. Ethel Brookner of Dixon conducted a beautiful memorial service during the day.

Use Frying Basket.
You can blanch vegetables much more easily if you will put them in a wire frying basket and plunging into boiling water the required number of times.

Flavors Ginger Bread.
You can use left-over coffee for mixing ginger bread, and will improve the flavor by so doing.

Keeps Lettuce Fresh.
Lettuce will keep fresh for a week if you put it in a cloth or in a paper bag, then put it in a pail and keep on the ice or in a cool place.

Will Give Flavor.
Fish that is comparatively tasteless is improved by lemon juice or vinegar with an onion or other seasoning.

Turn Bristles Down.
Never let hair brushes lie with the bristles up while drying as this softens the bristles and also softens the glue which holds the bristles and brush together.

To Clean Covers.
The covers of cloth-bound books may be sponged with chloroform if they seem badly soiled.

COOLIDGE IS DIFFERENT.

Without any knowledge of what the democrats would do, because their convention came later, President Coolidge let it be known that the only condition he imposed in selection of his running mate was that he should not be named to catch votes of persons opposed to views of the nominee for president.

His attitude was diametrically opposed to that of John W. Davis, the democratic nominee.

Davis, knowing his connection with the house of Morgan, knowing his reputation as attorney for New York bankers and his position as a railroad director, knowing the denunciations heaped upon him by William Jennings Bryan, made the personal selection of Charles W. Bryan to draw support of the element of the democratic party in the west, as a candidate for vice president, as the tail to his kite.

That is not a political offense. It is not new in political manners and maneuvers. In fact it frequently is done. Had it not been a frequent occurrence, Coolidge would not have thought it necessary to send his word to Cleveland. When your own party does it, you call it a well-balanced ticket. When opponents do it, you call it a straddle.

But Coolidge would have none of either. He declined to name the candidate, but he frowned disapproval on any proposal to straddle or to balance the ticket by compromising republican principles.

THE "THRILL" BUSINESS.

Up in Grand Rapids a woman—a wife and mother—is under arrest because she stole dresses from a department store, not because her circumstances influenced her to do so, but because she wanted the "thrill of it."

In Maine a fine young boy was caught while driving a bootleggers' automobile. No, he wasn't a member of the gang. He cared nothing about liquor and did not drink himself, or sell drink to others. He liked "the thrill" of being chased by the prohibition officers and just "stepping on 'er."

In a little town of the middle west, a boy of 14 is in the hands of the constable because he has been scattering tacks and screws along a much-traveled highway adjacent to town, much to the damage of automobile tires and otherwise comparatively good dispositions.

He had no feeling of ill-will against machine or driver, just liked to hear the hiss and pop of air-filled tires and the vocal outbursts of outraged autoists. He liked "the thrill" of it.

A young man in New York has been caught by the police, after a long quest. He had set fire to some 20-odd empty houses. He was possessed by an irresistible desire to hear the clatter of fire apparatus, the shouts and screams of men and women and to see the rush of crowds and the roll of the ominous smoke. He liked "the thrill" of it.

The "thrill" business seems to be on the increase, but, even at that, it stands out distinctively and repulsively because it is exceptional. Reaction from it will come in due time, as always is the case, and law and good order will prevail.

As a matter of fact, people everywhere, in a vast majority, are now going about their usual affairs soberly and sedately, and their influence for even and level living cannot be neutralized by tangents in crime or otherwise.

Common decency never will be and never has been entirely out of fashion.

THE ROAD BOND ISSUE.

No matter what your party affiliations, every voter can vote for the $100,000,000 road bond issue. And it is that proposition that is causing more concern right now than any other. The majority of the voters of Illinois favor the plan, but will the majority vote for it?

In order that the bond issue may carry it is necessary that it receive a majority of all votes cast at the election. If you ignore the little ballot on which the road bond issue appears, and fail to vote on it at all, the result is the same as though you voted against the bond issue. In other words, if you are against the bond issue, you need not vote at all, but if you are in favor of it, you must vote for it or your vote is counted against it. There is no neutral ground.

We do not believe it necessary to present argument in favor of the bond issue. Everyone knows the value that the last bond issue was to the state of Illinois in the matter of concrete roads. We are already using many miles of this concrete around Dixon. The proposed bond issue will be of proportionally greater benefit to the state and to this community. It will insure the building of a concrete road from Dixon to Rockford, through the beautiful Rock River Valley, another road from Dixon to Princeton and the Meridian Highway through the east half of Lee county. We will have these roads built immediately at no expense, for we will continue paying auto license fees whether the roads are built or not and the bond issue plan proposes to build the roads and pay for them with auto license money. There will be no expense to the general tax fund. Does anyone need to be told of the value of these roads to Dixon and every other community or of the personal value to everyone who owns or rides in an automobile? No, it may be taken for granted that the roads are desirable. The plan for financing them is sound and sensible. So vote for the bond issue.

No telling how much money is spent to run the government and taxpayers.

It must be awful to feel bad and have nothing special to kick about.

Have you noticed the increase in beauty contests since women vote?

Among the wild movements on foot we have the new fall dances.

A man with a noisy hat usually talks through it.

Nobody seems to care about the price of cotton stockings.

Some say the new dances broaden the feet while others claim they only thicken the head.

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS

by Olive Roberts Barton

NO. 22—THE MAGIC ANCHOR

"Use it like a lasso," he explained.

Davy Jones sent for his magic anchor and gave it to Nick.
"Use it like a lasso," he explained.
"A lasso wouldn't be a bit more use in the sea any more than an anchor would be in a desert. Just hang it over your sea-horse's neck and when you see Tweekanose, let out the rope and throw it. It will be sure to catch him."

"But—" said Nancy and Nick and the Sand Man and Captain Pennywinkle all together. "But—"

"But what?" Davy Jones wanted to know. "Why is everybody looking so queer 'n everything?"

"Because," explained Nick, "our sea-horses aren't much bigger than pollywogs and the anchor is as big as a wash-tub."

"Why, so it is!" declared Davy Jones. "But what of it? Look at you two children. I bet you anything that you used to be as big as real children."

"We are real children," declared Nancy. "The reason we are little enough to ride on sea-horses is that we can make ourselves any size at all as long as we have on our magic shoes."

"To, ho, ho, and a bottle or rum!" roared Davy Jones. "Well, this anchor is magic, too. I wouldn't have it if it wasn't. Just watch!"

And he said:

"Ink, wink.

Now ponder and think.

Down under the water,

It's right you should shrink."

And instantly the magic anchor shrank until it was small enough for a watch chain.

Davy Jones picked it up and handed it to Nick. "Here you are," he said. "If this doesn't do the work and catch that rascal, Tweekanose, I'm very much mistaken."

"But how can we get it back to you?" asked Nick.

"Chickens always come home to roost," said Davy Jones. "Just drop it into the ocean any time, any place and it will come right back."

The Twins and the Sand man and Captain Pennywinkle thanked Davy Jones and bade him good-bye.

Then they started to look again for Tweekanose on the bottom of the ocean.

One good thing they did. It just happened that they passed the magic mill that ground out the salt that made the ocean bitter. You know! The one the dwarf lost overboard off a boat and that has been grinding out salt ever since?

Well it had, and when the Twins

SICK WOMAN MADE HAPPY

Entirely Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Mart, Texas.—"I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to build me up as was all run-down, nervous and sick. I ached and hurt all over so that I was often compelled to go to bed, and I had to have most of my work done. No medicine seemed to help me until one of my neighbors who was taking the Vegetable Compound insisted on me trying a bottle of it. The medicine helped me from the first, and the best of all is that I can even sew again without that awful, nervous feeling I was used to having. And I used to take crying spells, with such a blue feeling that I cannot explain.

Now all that has left me. I feel so cheerful, and I have gained in weight, sleep well and eat hearty. Oh! I wish I had words to express what this medicine has done for me! I am a housekeeper and do every thing from the sewing to the washing now and it doesn't hurt me. You may use my letter in any way you wish. I will be glad to help any suffering woman, to the road of health and happiness."

THE LAIR OF THE FIGHTING ILLINI, ILLINOIS' GREAT MEMORIAL STADIUM

This is the great Memorial Stadium of the University of Illinois, all ready to welcome the 66,000 people who will thrill at the Illinois-Michigan game next Saturday. The Stadium cost $1,700,000 and is a gift of students and alumni to the state. Many football fans who procrastinated will be unable to see the Michigan game, but there is solace for them in the announcement that Illinois also plays Iowa, November 1 and Ohio, November 2, in the Stadium and that there will be plenty of accommodations for all. The beauty about the Illinois Stadium is that 75 per cent of the fans are located between the "goal posts" so that almost any seat is a good one.

The dedicatory exercises will be held on Friday afternoon, October 17, after a parade of ex-service Illini and students and alumni. The stadium will be dedicated to the memory of 200 Illinois men who died in the war. On Saturday afternoon just before the game, Director George Huff will formally present the stadium to the state.

Miners Praise Davis for His Part in their Trial

By Associated Press Leased Wire
Washington, Oct. 16.—Three letters from union men praising the part taken by John W. Davis in the litigation growing out of the West Virginia coal strike of 1897 were made public today through the democratic national committee, by William B. Wilson, secretary of labor in the Wilson cabinet.

Barney Flaherty, an organizer for the United Mine Workers at the time of the strike, and now a coal miner at Sawyerville, Ill., wrote that Mr. Davis had made "the best defense I ever heard" of thirty-five miners arrested in the Fairmont field.

Kramer Powell, president of local 4,438, United Mine Workers, near Clarksburg, said that when "twenty-seven of us fellows at the Montana mine" were arrested, "John J. Davis (father of the democratic nominee) and John W. Davis volunteered to defend us and did defend us free of all charges."

"Oh, a moment, pray!" cried Lord Henry. "Do you seriously tell us, Mistress Rosamund, that it was Lionel Tressilian who murdered Peter Godolphin?"

"Seriously?" she echoed, and her lips were twisted in a little smile of scorn. "I not merely tell it you, I swear it here in the sight of God. It was Lionel who murdered my brother and it was Lionel who put it about that the deed was Sir Oliver's. It was said that Sir Oliver had run away from the consequences of something discovered against him, and I to my shame believed the public voice. But I have since discovered the truth—"

"The truth, do you say, mistress?" cried the impetuous Sir John in a voice of passionate contempt. "The truth—"

Again his Lordship was forced to intervene.

"Have patience, man," he admonished the knight. "The truth will prevail in the end, never fear, Killigrew."

"Meanwhile we are wasting time," grumbled Sir John, and on that fell moodily silent.

"Are we further to understand you to say, mistress," Lord Henry resumed, "that the prisoner's disappearance from Penarrow was due not to flight, as was supposed, but to his having been trepanned by order of his brother?"

"That is the truth as I stand here in the sight of Heaven," she replied in a voice that rang with sincerity and carried conviction to more than one of the officers seated at that table.

"By that act the murderer sought not only to save himself from exposure, but to complete his work by succeeding to the Tressilian estates. Sir Oliver was to have been sold into slavery to the Moors of Barbary. Instead the vessel upon which he sailed was captured by Spaniards, and he was sent to the galleys by the Inquisition. When his galley was captured by Moslem corsairs he took the only way of escape that offered. He became a corsair and a leader of corsairs, and then—"

"What else he did we know," Lord Henry interrupted. "And I assure you it would all weigh very lightly with us or with any court if what else you say is true."

"It is true. I swear it, my lord," she repeated.

"Aye," he answered, nodding gravely. "But can you prove it?"

"What better proof can I offer you than that I love him, and have married him?"

"Bah!" said Sir John.

"That, mistress," said Lord Henry, "is proof that yourself you believe this amazing story. But it is not proof that the story itself is true. You had it, I suppose," he continued smoothly, "from Oliver Tressilian himself?"

"That is so; but in Lionel's own presence and Lionel himself confirmed it—admitting its truth."

"You dare say that?" cried Sir John, and stared at her in incredulous anger. "My God! You dare say that?"

"I dare and do," she answered him, giving him back look for look.

Lord Henry sat back in his chair, and tugged restfully at his ash-colored beard, his world face overcast and thoughtful. There was something here he did not understand at all.

"Mistress Rosamund," he said quietly, "let me exhort you to consider the gravity of your words. You are virtually accusing one who is no longer able to defend himself; if your story is established, infamy will rest forever upon the memory of Lionel Tressilian. Let me ask you again, and let me entreat you to answer scrupulously: Did Lionel Tressilian admit the truth of this thing which you say that the prisoner charged him?"

"Once more I solemnly swear that what I have spoken is true; that Lionel Tressilian did in my presence, when charged by Sir Oliver with the murder of my brother and the kidnapping of himself, admit these charges. Can I make it any plainer, sir?"

Lord Henry spread his hands.

"After that, Killigrew, I do not think we can go further in this matter. Sir Oliver must go with us to England and there take his trial."

But there was one present—that officer named Youldon—whose wits, it seems, were of keener temper.

"By your leave, my lord," he now interposed, and he turned to question the witness. "What was the occasion on which Sir Oliver forced this admission from his brother?"

Truthfully she answered: "At his house in Algiers, on the night he—"

She checked suddenly, perceiving then the trap that had been set for her. And the others perceived it also. Sir John leapt into the breach which Youldon had so awkwardly made in her defence.

"Continue, pray," he bade her. "On the night he—?"

"On the night we arrived there," she answered desperately, the color now receding slowly from her face.

"And that, of course," said Sir John slowly (mockingly almost), "was the first occasion on which you heard this explanation of Sir Oliver's conduct?"

"It was," she faltered—perforce.

"So that," insisted Sir John, determined to leave her no loophole whatsoever, "so that until that night you had naturally continued to believe Sir Oliver to be the murderer of your brother?"

She hung her head in silence, realizing that the truth could not prevail here since she had hampered it with a falsehood, which was now being dragged into the light.

"Answer me!" Sir John commanded.

"There is no need to answer," said Lord Henry slowly, in a voice of pain, his eyes lowered to the table. "There can, of course, be but one answer, Mistress Rosamund has told us that he did not abduct her forcibly; that she went with him of her own free will and married him; and she has urged that circumstance as a proof of her conviction of his innocence. Yet now it becomes plain that at the time she left England with him she still believed him to be her brother's slayer. Yet she asks us to believe that he did not abduct her."

He spread his hands again and pursed his lips in a sort of pained contempt.

"Let us make an end, a God's name!" said Sir John, rising.

"Ah, wait!" she cried. "I swear that all I have told you is true; all

"He lied, the base, treacherous dog!" she cried.

but the matter of the abduction. I admit that, but I condoned it in view of what I have since learnt."

"She admits it!" mocked Sir John.

But she went on without heeding him.

"Knowing what he has suffered through the evil of others, I gladly own him my husband, hoping to make some amends to him for the part I had in his wrongs. You must believe me, sir. But if you will not, I ask you is his action of yesterday to count for naught? Are you not to remember that but for him you would have had no knowledge of my whereabouts?"

They stared at her in fresh surprise.

"To what do you refer now, mistress? What action of his is responsible for this?"

"Do you need to ask? Are you so set on murdering him that you affect ignorance? Surely you know that it was he dispatched Lionel to inform you of my whereabouts?"

Lord Henry tells us that at this he smote the table with his open palm, displaying an anger he could no longer curb.

"This is too much!" he cried. "Hitherto I have believed you sincere, but misguided and mistaken. But so deliberate a falsehood transcends all bounds. What has come to you, girl? Why, Lionel himself told us the circumstances of his escape from the galleys. Himself he told us how that villain had him flogged and then hung him into the sea for dead."

"Ah!" said Sir Oliver between his teeth. "I recognize Lionel there! He would be false to the end, of course. I should have thought of that."

Rosamund, at bay, in a burst of regal anger, leaned forward to face Lord Henry and the others.

"He lied, the base, treacherous dog!" she cried.

"Madam," Sir John rebuked her, "you are speaking of one who is all but dead."

"And more than damned," added Sir Oliver.

"Sir," he cried, "you prove naught but your own stupidity when you accuse this gentle lady of falsehood."

Correct Clothes To Meet The Obligation Of Every Occasion

Listen To The Band!

They have put brilliant color into our hosiery. They have put brilliant color into our handkerchiefs. They have put brilliant color into our belts. They have put brilliant color into our golf stockings. They have put brilliant color into our sweaters. They have put brilliant color even into our, hitherto, humble suspenders and garters. There is only one spot left to put brilliant color, and they have put it there, too—our hat bands. Soon, a man's dress may vie with a woman's in colorful brightness, for the motto of the day is, "Swat The Gloom!"

Up to recently, you could only express your taste and personality in the patterns of shirts and cravats. The rest of a man's clothes were like a sombre background stretching beyond the spotlight. Now, instead of laying on color with a camel's hair brush, you may put it on with a spade.

There is, though, an obvious danger in the employment of too many color spots in men's dress, for unless, harmoniously chosen, they hiss and spit at one another like a brace of cats. Therefore, choose colors carefully. Be sure that they match or contrast engagingly and effectively, or let them alone.

However, color is wholly appropriate upon the band of a slam-down sporting hat of the sort reproduced here. Field, country and knockabout impose few, if any, limitations in the use of vivid hues, for you have the green of the turf; the blue of the sky; the purple of the hills and the crimson or orange of the sunset to act as a foil for the boldest effects. The sportsman is traditionally indulgent to "cheerio" colors. He is out for fun, not out at a function, and he is a-tingle with the spirit of "Glad I'm Alive!" and "It's A Good Old World!"

Therefore, light-weight felt hats with brim turned down and encircled with brilliantly striped ribbons in college, club, regimental or blazer colors are smart, if held to their place and purpose—the open spaces.

Tricks of FAKE MEDIUMS
BY HOWARD THURSTON

BY HOWARD THURSTON
America's Master Magician
When a "medium" produces chalk writing between two slates which have been bolted together at all four corners, deception may be seen impossible, to the average person. The illustration, however, clearly explains the method employed. One of the slates is constructed so that the end of the frame is removable, between the two corner bolts. The slate is attached to that end of the frame, and may be slid out of the remainder of the frame. The "medium" writes upon the lower slate and slides the upper slate back into its frame. This is done when the slates are placed in a cabinet with the "medium." If the slates are well made the fraud cannot be detected. (Another article of the series will appear tomorrow.)

Gale Keeps Shenandoah at Her Mast in San Diego

San Diego, Calif., Oct. 15.—(By the Associated Press)—Gales in the Pacific northwest reaching as great a velocity as 90 miles an hour today held the navy dirigible Shenandoah, manacled to her mooring mast here and caused postponement of her departure for Camp Lewis, Wash., until Thursday morning. Late last night advices were received from the U. S. Weather Bureau at San Francisco and from Lieut. B. H. Wyatt of the North Island Air Station who flew to Seattle, strongly urging that the Shenandoah be held at San Diego until the blow had passed.

The Affair at Flower Acres
by CAROLYN WILLS
© 1924 by NKA Service Inc.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

The body of Douglas Raynor is found in the early evening on the floor of the sun room at Flower Acres, his long island home standing over the dead man, pistol in hand, is Malcolm Finley, former sweetheart of Raynor's wife, Nancy. Eva Turner, Raynor's nurse, stands by the door with her hand still on the light switch. In a moment Nancy appears, white-faced and terrified. Orville Kent, Nancy's brother, comes in from the south side of the room, and then Ezra Goddard, friend of Finley, enters upon the scene. "I didn't do it," Finley protests. "I don't think I did." Then Mrs. Raynor did it," accuses Miss Turner; "before I could get the light on I saw you both—now Goddard goes toward the stricken man. 'Perhaps Raynor isn't dead,' he says.

NOW ON WITH THE STORY

"Yes, he's dead," Goddard said, after a brief examination. "I think the women should go to their rooms—or, at least, away from here."

But none of the women would do this, and, as Miss Mattie showed signs of faintness, Eva Turner hastened away and returned with restoratives.

"Hatfield," Ezra Goddard said, giving his orders curtly, "call the family doctor—you know his number?"

"Oh, yes, sir," and the butler disappeared.

"Did you shoot Raynor, Malcolm?" was the next question.

"No," said Finley, but his face was so drawn with shock and sorrow that his word carried no clear conviction.

"Then what are you doing with that pistol?"

"I—I picked it up—as I came in—Look here, Goddard, it's none of your business!"

"Oh, yes, it is—I'm making it my business. Have you no more to say?"

"No more," said Malcolm Finley. "I have," said the nurse. "It was either Mr. Finley or Mrs. Raynor who fired that shot!"

CHAPTER IV
Detective Dobbins

IF Ezra Goddard had followed the sea, he would have been the sort of sailor who is dubbed able seaman. If he had chosen the ministry as a career, he would have been known as an eminent divine. Had he plucked on the legal profession, he would have been spoken of as a noted lawyer. Or had he been an author, he would most certainly have attained the rank of celebrated novelist.

Moreover, if he had bent his talents and energies to the science of sleuthing, he would have risen rapidly to the height of Transcendent Detective, and would have become famous.

But detective he was not, for though possessed of the necessary perspicacity and perspicuity, he had had no training or experience, and knew little or nothing of fingerprint work or of third-degree practice.

So it was really owing more to his inherent generalship than to his deductive ability that he stepped forward and assumed control of the entire situation.

His efficiency in emergency was well nigh 100 per cent, and within fifteen minutes of the discovery of Douglas Raynor's death, Goddard had sent word to the family physician, the county medical examiner and the local police. And within an hour they had all arrived.

Doctor Saxton came first. Though he was the family physician, he had rarely been called to Flower Acres, for there had been little illness in the household. When Douglas Raynor began to get faddy about his diet, he sought advice from various well advertised books, and, later, had decided on the employment of a resident dietitian. Miss Turner was by no means the first of these. Indeed, she was merely the present incumbent, and was already slated for dismissal by her patient.

But, being present, and being a graduate nurse, Doctor Saxton immediately spoke to her profession.

"There are strange conditions here," he said, "most peculiar, inexplicable conditions. Had Douglas Raynor any enemies?"

He glanced around the room, and as no one else spoke, Ezra Goddard said:

He glanced around the room, and as no one else spoke, Ezra Goddard said:

ally, and seemed to rely on her as a stance. She came to him tremblingly, and with an obvious aversion to touching or even looking at the dead body of her late patient.

"Shot through the heart," the doctor said, after a brief investigation. "Who did it?"

To this direct question there was no answer. Miss Turner compressed her lips into a straight, unsmiling line, while the others present, who were huddled round the sides of the sun room, gave only aghast, wondering looks at the doctor.

Held by some fascination of horror, they had all remained in the presence of the dead. Goddard had advised it, and the rest had inertly obeyed.

Nancy, her hand clasped in her brother's, was half reclining in a long chair, while Miss Mattie sat bolt upright, eagerly watching everything that transpired.

Malcolm Finley sat, with folded arms and a calm, inscrutable face, his gray eyes moving slowly from the dead victim of the tragedy to the living wife and back again.

From his scrutiny of the livid face and contorted muscles of Raynor Doctor Saxton at last lifted a puzzled countenance to the group of anxious spectators.

"There are strange conditions here," he said, "most peculiar, inexplicable conditions. Had Douglas Raynor any enemies?"

He glanced around the room, and as no one else spoke, Ezra Goddard said:

"I wish Nan would go to her room," Orville Kent said; "she can be of no use tonight, and when the policeman come it will drive her frantic."

"She ought to be driven frantic," Miss Mattie's cold voice declared. "Of course she can't go to her room, Orville; she must be questioned with the rest of us."

Notwithstanding the awfulness of the occasion, it was quite clear that Miss Mattie looked forward to the questioning not without relish.

At last, to her satisfaction, the police arrived. The others, too, felt a certain sense of relief.

"In view of the fact that someone shot and killed him, I think we may logically assume that he had."

The tinge of irony was slight, but quite enough to annoy the doctor.

"Not at all, sir. It is perfectly possible that the shooting might have been an accident, or—a suicide."

"Oh, was it? Do you think that?" Nan spoke rapidly, in jerky accents, as if surprised but not displeased at this suggestion.

"I can't say yet, Mrs. Raynor. On the face of it, it looks as if he had been shot down by the hand of another, but until after a more detailed examination, I prefer not to give a definite opinion. And for that, I want to wait the arrival of the medical examiner. When he comes, I must ask that we be left by ourselves, except that I wish Miss Turner to remain with us in her professional capacity."

"I'd like to say a word—" began Malcolm Finley, but Goddard stopped him peremptorily.

"Not a word, Mal. Surely you know better. This is not the time or place for any revelation, theory or suspicion. In fact, I ask of you to say nothing definite or vital until the examiner and the detectives get here."

"I shall say what I choose," announced Nan, "and I say—"

"My dear Mrs. Raynor," Goddard spoke quietly, but looked at her with most of the fact, that quite aside from yourself, what you would say might affect others in a way for which you would be sorry."

"What do you mean?" she said. "It doesn't matter what I mean, but it might matter a great deal what you say, so I ask you, I beg of you, to say nothing."

His insistence won the day, and Nan said no more that hour and then in a whisper to Orville.

And so, when Doctor Fraser, the examiner, came, everybody was turned out of the room except Nurse Turner.

The others fled into the large living room, and seated themselves. Malcolm Finley almost gave way to his strong desire to sit by the side of Nancy, but compelled himself to conquer it, and crossed the room to sit beside Miss Mattie.

She, however, was so pointedly cold and distant of manner, that Finley turned aside and began talking to Goddard.

"I hope a fairly decent detective will be sent," he said; "for this is not a case to be bungled."

"It is not, indeed," Goddard assented; "I only hope the doctors can prove it outside."

"Why?" cried Nan. "Suicide is the deed of a coward—and Douglas was never that!"

"No, he was not," Goddard said; "yet I wish it might have been—for a murder mystery is a long, hard road to travel."

"It's murder—but it's a mystery," these words were spoken by Miss Mattie. She looked straight at Nan, and though she said no more definite word, it was easily seen that already she accused Nancy Raynor of the death of her husband.

"But Nancy didn't shoot him," the spinster added, and Nan looked up quickly, to see the stern old face as accusing as ever, and the sharp old eyes glaring at her.

"I don't know what you mean," she said, wearily, and leaning back in her chair she closed her eyes, and her brother watched her affectionately.

"I wish Nan would go to her room," Orville Kent said; "she can be of no use tonight, and when the policeman come it will drive her frantic."

"She ought to be driven frantic," Miss Mattie's cold voice declared. "Of course she can't go to her room, Orville; she must be questioned with the rest of us."

Notwithstanding the awfulness of the occasion, it was quite clear that Miss Mattie looked forward to the questioning not without relish.

At last, to her satisfaction, the police arrived. The others, too, felt a certain sense of relief.

Street Fighting Today in Chinese City Report

Canton, Oct. 15.—(By the Associated Press)—The streets of Canton were the scene of heavy fighting today between the merchants volunteer corps and the so-called "red army" composed of Chinese laborers. The fighting continued at 4 o'clock this afternoon, fighting taking place outside the shanties thereby interrupting all traffic.

London Oversubscribed Loan to German Government

London, Oct. 15.—When the subscription list for the British portion of the $200,000,000 Dawes plan loan to Germany closed at 1 o'clock this afternoon, it was indicated that the loan had been considerably oversubscribed.

WANTED—Anyone troubled with itching feet to try the best foot powder on the market, called Heslo, Sterling's Drug Store.

Lancaster, Pa.—Edward McElroy of

Closet for Foods

Anyone who can forage a little lumber can have a fresh air closet for foods, and this is an excellent method for keeping them fresh and at the same time keeping smells from the pantry.

All that is needed are a few laths, some nails and a little wire gauze, with a shelf or two stuck in. Almost anyone who can drive a nail should be able to make one.

Place it in a cool spot, within handy reach and, unless the weather is hot this is a better place for food than any ice chest.

Clean earthen dishes should be used to hold the food and never in any sort of metal. Cheesecloth bags can easily be made and into these slip the plates and food. If ants should find the place put a coat of camphor around the box every two weeks or so.

About every six months take the box down and scald it thoroughly with boiling soda water.

WEARS 58 BADGES

New York.—The world's champion badge collector was arrested by Beach street police. The prisoner, Samuel Levy, 17, wore 58 badges which he announced simultaneously a news reporter in Buffalo, a fireman in seven cities in three states, an ocean-going pilot, a musician, and a deputy sheriff for a railroad.

Magetta called the role of the ex-Prisoner of War Association and he also answered, "Here," all the other members of the association having died. He is 88 years old and one of the founders of the organization.
